FILM SCREENING FORUM

Tuesday, February 16, 3 p.m., Building G, Student Lounge

Wednesday, February 17, 3 p.m., North Hudson Campus

SELMA

A drawn portrait of Martin Luther King, Jr.'s campaign to register African American voters to participate in the ballot box. The film portrays how the will of 15,000 civil rights marchers can stand up to the might of segregation. Despite a violent confrontation at Selma's Edmund Pettus Bridge, the marchers continue as they approach the state capitol in Montgomery. The film shows that the vote can change people's lives, that people can affect history, and that the fight against racial injustice can change us all.
