
INTRODUCTION TO ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES

ENV 110 Introduction to Environmental Studies3.0 UNITS

This course is designed to serve as an introduction to interdisciplinary thinking about the relationships between humans and their environments, and it seeks to explore the problems and possibilities that emerge from these relationships. Students will also learn the importance of natural resources, ecosystems and biodiversity; evaluate and discuss the effectiveness of environmental policies, and identify energy resources and approaches to waste management.